Plan well, and you'll have a smooth travel season.

Counting down to your holiday is exciting; whether you're travelling for business or leisure, there is always the anticipation of all the fun that lies ahead. These months can also be hectic – it's easy to get distracted by the busy social calendar, the never-ending emails or too many travel details. So, it's important to stay organised in order to enjoy your journey and get the most out of your trip.

With these five tips, you can embrace your travel season and enjoy the best parts of it:

1. Put your plans in place It sounds obvious, but where you will be is crucial when planning your travel season. Check the weather, the season and the political situation, and the best places to visit will become clear. If you're travelling for business, check the latest news and connect to clients to get the best updates on topics you'll be working on. It can also help to connect with your business partners to tell them about the places you are visiting. 2. Book your trip

Search for travel agents to get good deals, as well as stay in great hotels and enjoy top-notch restaurants at reasonable prices. Once you've booked, fill out your travel diary and plan what you want to see, where you're going and what you want to do, then check and cross things off the list. This will help you stay organised and it won't seem like work. 3.

Separate business from play Don't let work become all-consuming. If you're working, it might be easy to become distracted – ignoring social commitments and posting on social media about your travels. But even if you're off work, it's easy to get caught up in the hustle and bustle and lose sight of why you are travelling. Take yourself away, have fun, relax and enjoy the holiday. 4. Leave plenty of time for sightseeing
