It is situated between Fulham Palace Road to the north and Portobello Road to the south. The name "Cipriani Street" was derived from that of the first owner of the land Cipriano Saeta in the mid-18th century. It is named after the Cipriano Saeta's son, the then owner of the land, who named it in honour of the Venetian painter Giovanni Segantini (1858–1899) who had spent some time in the area. The street was once home to the Cipriani Club. The street now contains several bars and restaurants, although the part of the street between the Palms cinema and the Portobello roundabout is now rather run-down. Before this was bypassed on the new Fulham Palace Road in 2005, traffic along the street was high as it was the main route between Queensway and Fulham High Street. There is also a police station here. References External links Category:Streets in the London

What's New in the SmartEdit Writer?

In a time where what we wear and how we act is controlled by modern technology, the old human spirit has been fading away. This alienation from Nature, from other creatures, and even from one another has deeply affected the human psyche and generates great tension between the people of the world. Perhaps you'll pick up a book and simply be unable to put it down because of the sheer entertainment value of the story. Then you're likely to want to write your own. Emma is a simple, open-source software that allows you to quickly create.docx documents for the purpose of story creation. Although in its initial stages, the software has some room to improve, it is already packed with useful features. Here's a list of the main features available: No limits: As with most.docx formats, there are no limits on the number of pages the document can hold, or the number of characters per page. Create storyboards: Instead of typing dialogue directly onto the page, you can create a storyboard - a visual representation of the scene or moment you're describing. Direct notes: Despite being based on.docx, Emma uses Microsoft Word's Notebook format for editing notes. Just like in Microsoft Word, you can create as many pages as needed for notes. Inline images: Direct images are embedded into the document; no special formatting is required. Hypothetical situation: You can create one.docx document where you describe an entire story. When completed, the file can be opened in Emma and used as a template for future stories. Custom formatting: You can use any font or style in your document, as well as insert tables, links, pictures, and more.
