I have tried: $('#' + $('input:radio:checked').attr('name')).val(); and $('input:radio:checked').attr('name').val(); the $('#' + $('input:radio:checked').attr('name')) gives me the name of the radio button, but not the value, and the $('input:radio:checked').attr('name').val() gives me undefined. How do I get the value of the currently selected Radio Button? Thanks A: Your problem is the space between the.attr() and.val() method. This means that you are getting the value of the id attribute of the element. Instead, use.attr('value'): $('#' + $('input:radio:checked').attr('name')).attr('value'); Or $('#' + $('input:radio:checked').attr('name')).val(); It will give you the selected radio value. A: Use this: var radioName = $('input:radio:checked').attr('name'); var radioValue = $('input:radio:checked').val(); A: This should work: $('radio').each(function(i, val) { if(this.checked) { var radioName = $(this).attr("name"); var radioValue = $(this).val(); alert(radioName + ":" + radioValue); } }); According to the World Health Organization, about 795,000 people were infected with HIV in 2010.
