Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a vehicle power transmission apparatus and a method for controlling the same. More specifically, the present invention relates to a vehicle power transmission apparatus for transmitting a driving force from an engine to a transmission that is controlled in accordance with a controlled state of the engine and a method for controlling the same. 2. Description of the Related Art A vehicle power transmission apparatus for transmitting a driving force from an engine to a transmission is conventionally known. JP-A-2009-264207 discloses a power transmission apparatus that controls the operation of a clutch and a brake to change a gear ratio of a continuously variable transmission. In the power transmission apparatus disclosed in JP-A-2009-264207, the number of revolutions of the transmission is adjusted by performing feedback control of the pressure of oil supplied to the clutch so that the differential gear ratio of the continuously variable transmission is set equal to a target value. For example, when the fuel supply to the engine is limited, the number of revolutions of the engine may be adjusted by performing feedback control to reduce the differential gear ratio of the continuously variable transmission (a gear ratio multiplication). By adjusting the differential gear ratio of the continuously variable transmission to a reduction gear ratio using feedback control, the engine speed may be reduced and the fuel efficiency of the engine may be improved. However, it may be difficult to set the number of revolutions of the engine at a desired target number of revolutions if the differential gear ratio of the continuously variable transmission is adjusted by performing feedback control, for example. Accordingly, the differential gear ratio of the continuously variable transmission may be set at a predetermined target number of revolutions. In this case, the clutch may be maintained in a closed state during a period from completion of vehicle deceleration to
