What's New in the?

What's new in VSuite Ramdisk Professional Edition 3.2.1: Add plenty of new features to increase productivity. Bug fixes.Stringfellow named head coach of Arkansas' defense Arkansas defensive coordinator Robb Smith announced Friday that he will step down as Arkansas' defensive coordinator in order to accept the head coaching job at Southeast Missouri State. Smith, 55, has served as Arkansas' defensive coordinator for the past three seasons after spending the previous six seasons as the defensive coordinator at LSU. He will succeed Houston Nutt, who was fired last week after a 9-4 season in which the Razorbacks struggled in the SEC. "Robb did a great job for me last year," head coach Bobby Petrino said in a statement. "He kept that defense playing at a high level and we'll miss him greatly. We appreciate his contributions to this team and this university over the last seven years. "We'll make the appropriate changes to our staff and go from there." Arkansas athletic director Steve Patterson said in a statement that it was a "tough decision" but that he believed Smith deserved the job. "Steve Patterson and I agreed with this decision," Petrino said in a statement. "Robb is a good coach and a good person. When you take on the head coaching position at a great place like Arkansas it is a tremendous privilege. "I have always enjoyed Robb's style of coaching, his knowledge, his attention to detail and I still do. But now we have a position at Arkansas that I can't fill as a head coach. I do appreciate what he and Bobby did for me and what our defense did for the Razorbacks last year." Smith's departure leaves Arkansas with little experience in the defensive coaching ranks. Cornerback coach Levi Damien, who was an assistant coach for Petrino at Louisville, is considered by many to be a frontrunner for the defensive coordinator job. Arkansas announced Wednesday that it had hired Greg Nord, former Jacksonville State head coach at defensive coordinator, to work with Petrino in all phases of football operations. Nord worked with the defensive ends as a defensive coordinator at Arizona and in the NFL with the Jets and Redskins.Blockchain, the technology that underpins the bitcoin digital currency, is being applied to a new financial services application: payment switches, which are a type of intelligent payments system that allow users to pay for goods using their smartphone, or soon their computer.
