I've attempted to use the type cast (const char *) but I'm getting an error saying this is an invalid identifier. I'm new to SQL so any help would be appreciated. CREATE FUNCTION 'PF_Prefix'(prefix varchar(30),table varchar(50)) RETURNS varchar(50) BEGIN DECLARE return_string varchar(50); SELECT replace(table,prefix,':') FROM Table WHERE name = (prefix) const char; SELECT replace(table,prefix,':') FROM Table WHERE name = (table) const char;

My year at the Shanghai World Expo - hkmurakami ===== philipkglass _the Chinese believe that friendship goes beyond business. Isn't it _love_? The "friendship" you mention is not friendship in any sense that Americans know or care about. ---- alexpetralia Perhaps I am missing something, but in the case of a business it seems that 'friendship' is just 'business'. Chinese people wouldn't be friends with each other and they wouldn't have friendships with Western people or American people for that matter. I think your point is that the cultural mindset is vastly different in China than in the West. I think that's a fairly common assumption, but I am still left with the impression that the Chinese like Americans, and their friendships with Americans are one of business/friendship. ---- jf22 I think you are correct. A friend is someone you will do anything for. A friend of business is someone you will try to manipulate so you can make money. Both are bad. ---- alexpetralia OK, fair enough.
