Co., 780 P.2d 1230, 1243 (Utah 1989), aff'd on other grounds, 850 P.2d 612 (Utah 1993). Paradigm's wrongful termination claim was based upon a retaliatory motive. It is undisputed that Pepsico raised this issue in its motion for summary judgment and that Pepsico developed the arguments regarding the alleged causal connection between Paradigm's filing of an unfair trade practices claim and Paradigm's termination of her employment. In the memorandum in support of the motion, Pepsico argued that "there is no evidentiary support for the conclusory allegation that Ms. Young was terminated because she filed the FTC[P]A complaint." We find that an inference exists that Paradigm believed they had an unfair trade practices claim, that Paradigm's determination to pursue that claim resulted in Paradigm's subsequent termination, and that Paradigm was attempting to proceed under a different cause of action. Paradigm also met its burden by arguing that the termination was a direct result of Paradigm's allegation that it had an unfair trade practices claim, and that circumstantial evidence indicated that a wrongful termination may have occurred. Paradigm does not cross-appeal from the trial court's grant of Pepsico's motion for summary judgment, and this issue is not raised on appeal to this court. Moreover, our review of the record indicates that Paradigm has not produced substantial evidence in the record which would create a genuine issue of material fact regarding its theory of wrongful termination. CONCLUSION In order to avoid seemingly illogical results, courts are required to engage in a literal construction of the language of statutes and are not free to ignore plain language. The insurance policy's exclusionary language unambiguously excluded coverage for claims that were based upon employment-related unfair trade practices. Paradigm's claims fell within the plain and ordinary meaning of the exclusion, and the trial court properly found that the policy did not cover the claims Paradigm made against Pepsico. Pursuant to the insurance policy's specific definition of occurrence, the cause of Paradigm's own conduct which

So I'm seeing on the second reply that the person also asking if he can make a question for the same question, and also I don't know where I can get the same question cause there's a word "if there isn't?"Q: How can I generate barcode in Nextcloud? How can I generate a barcode image for a nextcloud? I'm new in barcode and I want to create a web app that generates this type of barcode. A: See this question: Best OCR for iOS and Android? A good OCR package is Tesseract (for Android) and Hound (for iOS). Tesseract is based on a powerful statistical language model trained on 45TB of anonymized web text, using a technology similar to Google's Page Rank Hound offers a clean interface and good OCR, though it's not quite as powerful as Tesseract. The approach I would take is to develop an app that generates barcodes similar to the ones you already have. For instance, make your front-end components (HTML, CSS, JS) interactive for user input. When the user is done, use the Tesseract and/or Hound APIs to generate the barcode. Q: How can I pass parameters to a method within a class using Python? I have a class called User containing attributes user_name, user_pass and their methods take_login and close. I have another class called doer containing the class user. It has all the methods that should be used with the user class. I want to use the class user inside doer's method do, to: 1) Pass a new user to the class user, and have it's methods called within doer 2) Pass a new uid, and have it's methods called within doer. Here is the code: class User: """H
