Black-eyed kids - bdr I've been wondering about this for a long time, but it's also something that is asked quite often.My mother's oldest sister is blind. My mother used to sleep with her through the day so she'd wake up at night and tell her about everything that had happened to her over the day. One night, she started telling my mother about her neighbours children, who were black-eyed kids. My mother asked her what they looked like and told her they were not real. My mother said they were not. The aunt replied by saying "They're black-eyed kids in Peru". Then they went back to sleep. I've thought about this for a long time, I don't know what to believe. ====== edw519 _I don't know what to believe_ That's a start. More importantly, so are you. I'm here to help. Many people believe in the impossible. I bet you're one of them. You know what to believe. It's your truth. You _know_ because it's in your head. Can you do it without labels, names, opinions, or dogma? ~~~ bdr Is it that I'm more confident in the ignorance or that I'm on a mission to make the ignorance go away? ~~~ coglethorpe Then you're approaching it the wrong way. Ask questions. Join in discussion. But also realize you'll never learn without that initial instinct to believe. It's that conviction that makes you question. Not the inability to accept things as "true" on their own. ------ stevoski This woman has influenced my life in ways beyond my wildest dreams. The way she told me about her mother, who had died when she was just a young child, has never been forgotten. I've known that blind person for more than 30 years, and she believes this story completely. ~~~ bdr Thanks so much. I love hearing stories about people I've never met before. ------ bayareaguy There's a movie _Candy_ 0cc13bf012
