The country will be the biggest auto market by 2020 and manufacturers are betting heavily on the Bharat Stage-VI norms that come into force from April 1 to boost sales. To be implemented over a five-year period, the Bharat Stage-VI norms give fleet operators a break of almost 10% by reducing annual turnover at the rate of 12.5% each year. The government has allocated a series of premium slots for premium cars under its flagship 'Make in India' initiative, which was launched in 2010. The Bharat Stage-VI norms came into force from April 1, 2016, giving carmakers a one-year break. The norms are set at 12.5% for passenger vehicles and 17.5% for commercial vehicles. "The government has given premium categories some exemptions. We don't want luxury models to get a break. We want vehicles to be affordable by common people, but not of the common people," Suresh Prabhu, minister for road transport and highways, told FE Online. Prabhu said these provisions are valid for future policy revisions but "for now the intent is clear". The union ministry of road transport and highways has directed state transport corporations to ensure compliance of the norms. The ministry also wants vehicles in these segments to be marketed by April 1, 2019. "If we create the demand, car makers will increase the volume of production. Domestic industry has to compete with imported vehicles and this is not a good time for the Indian industry,"

John Kerry is off on the wrong foot, and it is getting narrower with each passing day," O'Reilly said of the Vietnam veteran's criticism of the "cowboy AIG bonus plan." Kerry said he hopes the companies that donated to President Bush or are candidates for federal money "do the right thing. I have not heard of a dime going to them and I have not heard of any company saying they're in trouble, no business is in trouble." Fox News senior judicial analyst Andrew Napolitano said "The government is not God. We don't have some God-given right to socialize the failure of bad business ventures." Napolitano said that by looking the other way on this, "we're allowing the political pressures of spending so much money to be more important than morality." Kerry said that President Bush's economic team "literally has no idea what they are doing." "They're busting the budget," he said. "They're spending money like no one's ever seen. They're throwing money at it, and it's not happening. President Bush says he's going to fix it. He can get it fixed. He has three and a half years." "Republicans have offered a grand bargain that includes new spending and new revenue, the Democratic alternative is 'hell no.'" Napolitano said. "They want to borrow, borrow and borrow until someone else has to pay the bill, so they can get back the money they owe. "If you want to see who the vice president is you should look at the people he cheers for every time he gives a speech. He cheers for Barack Obama more than John McCain," Napolitano said. "He cheers for President Obama more than John McCain, just like he cheered for Ann Romney. This man is truly a political machine." O'Reilly said of Joe Biden, "Joe Biden loves taxes." "If you kick a dog," Napolitano said, "he will eat you." e79caf774b

More specifically, the invention relates to network clients and servers capable of automatically configuring and reconfiguring transmission bandwidth based on network conditions. In the present paradigm of electronic mail (xe2x80x9ce-mailxe2x80x9d), data is first formatted as a bit stream at a sending end to be carried over a packet network to a receiving end. The packet network is often a public internetwork or other computer communications network. At the receiving end, the data is then formatted as a bit stream for display at a display device, such as a computer monitor, a television, or other form of presentation medium
