Talking About AGI & Education There are three essential questions that support the introduction of Artificial General Intelligence (AGI) into education. These questions are: "Where are we going with this technology?", "What are the risks to our society if we don't have the answers to these questions?" and "What are we willing to do to make the changes that are needed?" A quick Internet search will provide a plethora of answers to these questions, but the answers given are not always a good reflection of the overall concerns of the general public. We need to talk about these issues, the dangers, and the benefits of AGI in education. A first aspect relates to an electrical connector. A first example of such a connector relates to the connector 40 disclosed in US2011/0171873 A1, which is hereby incorporated by reference in its entirety. The connector 40 comprises a housing 41, a housing cover 42, and a strain relief member 43. The housing cover 42 is
