Q: Help with DataFrame and string operations this might be a really dumb question but it has been giving me some trouble. I have an excel file that contains many files of sequences (I use fasta as my backend). For each sequence I have a column with the sequence and a column with the percentage of errors. What I would like to do is to create a DataFrame that contains just the sequence and the percentage for each sequence. Here is an example: Seq Error 0 1 1 1 0 0 What I need is a DataFrame or numpy matrix that contains the sequence and the percentages of the errors. So something like the following: Seq Error 0 1 1 1 0 0

A: Check pandas.read_csv by specifying sep=',' for read the exact format of your data. import pandas as pd df = pd.read_csv('Data.csv', sep=',') If your excel file has a header, then you should first read your data by specifying the header df = pd.read_csv('Data.csv', header=0) Alternatively you could use openpyxl to read your excel file and then use pd.concat to append the sequence and error. In openpyxl you can specify the header in the FileFormat new_df = pd.concat([df], axis=1)

Actually, that won't work for Elden Ring. Second, launch the game and make sure you see "Integrated Content Client" was you see in the small installer window. Forth, click the Cracked Game menu > Cracked Game as normal. Finally, enjoy the game as normal.
