Is there a way I can get a message if the document fails to parse? I've not been able to find any documentation on this. A: If you are using parse() method of Tika, then you can add an error handler to catch TikaException. The TikaException is a super class of ParseException which contains the parsed document. So you can get all the parsed values from this class. Q: Drupal: 'last_activity' is not working on content types In my site, when a content is created and last_activity field is set, it shows in admin/content/node/view in the machine-readable form when the node is viewed. But when I add it to a content type, it's not working. It's not showing up 0cc13bf012
